

Using JSTOR to Search Online

JSTOR stands for Journal Storage, and their collection of journals and periodicals goes back to the start of publication, more years than most databases. Due to a 'moving copyright wall,' the most current volumes may not be accessible yet, but JSTOR covers over 1.5 million scholarly full-text articles.

Access JSTOR via the Library's homepage, www.cui.edu/library, on the left under "Research Tools".

This is the JSTOR Search page:

Notice the top menu with helpful links.

There are three kinds of searches.

Type the search term in the box and click on Search.

You may limit your search by searching specific disciplines. (see below)

You may use Boolean Operators to help limit or expand your search.

Clicking on one or more of the following disciplines can help narrow your search. (See # of journals)
